Master Fellowships in Public Health and Tropical Medicine, Wellcome Trust, UK

This scheme provides junior researchers with the opportunity to gain research experience and training at Master’s degree level. The scheme aims to support research that will improve public health and tropical medicine at a local, national and global level.

Scheme at a glance

Career stage: Postgraduate
Where your host organisation is based: Low- and middle-income countries
Type of researcher: Public health
Level of funding: Studentship stipend, fees and research expenses
Duration of funding: 30 months

Who can apply

You can apply for a Master’s Fellowship in Public Health and Tropical Medicine if you:

- are a national of a low- or middle-income country
- hold a clinical or non-clinical undergraduate degree in a subject relevant to public health or tropical medicine.

You must also:

- be at an early stage in your career with limited research experience (but you must have a demonstrated interest in, or aptitude for, research)
- have sponsorship from an eligible host organisation in a low- or middle-income country
- have a research proposal that is within our public health and tropical medicine remit.

Go to the World Bank website to see a list of low- and middle-income countries.

Who can’t apply

You can’t apply if you’re:

- intending to be based in the UK, Republic of Ireland or another high-income country (although your taught course can be anywhere in the world)
- a researcher in India – instead see the Wellcome Trust/Department of Biotechnology India Alliance
- currently applying for another Wellcome Trust fellowship.
What we’re looking for
Your research proposal should focus on an area within our public health and tropical medicine remit. Research can include laboratory-based molecular analysis of field or clinical samples, but we don’t normally consider projects focused solely on studies in vitro or using animal models.

We’re particularly interested in requests for research training support in the social sciences, demography, health economics, medical statistics and vector biology.

When we consider your application, we’ll look at:

- the quality and importance of your research question(s)
- the feasibility of your approach to solving these problems
- the suitability of your choice of research environments
- the suitability of the Master’s course you select – it should take place at a recognised centre of excellence and provide you with training that will complement your research project.

What we offer
A Master’s Fellowship in Public Health and Tropical Medicine is normally for 30 months and can be held on a part-time basis. The first 12 months should be dedicated to doing a taught Master’s course at a recognised centre of excellence. The following 18 months is normally for your research project.

Support during the Master’s course
The support includes:

- a stipend. If your taught course or training is in the UK, you’ll get £15,000 a year (outside London) or £17,000 a year (Greater London). If your course or training is outside the UK, you should check living costs with your prospective training organisation. Contact us for advice if you need extra funding (eg for dependants).
- travel costs (eg outward and return airfares)
- approved tuition fees, according to the rate charged by the training organisation. We usually provide funds at the level charged to the UK/EU students, rather than the overseas student rate.

We support distance learning Master’s degrees.

If your stipend is liable for tax in the country you’re based in, we’ll provide costs to cover the taxed amount.

How to apply
You must submit your application through the Wellcome Trust Grant Tracker (WTGT).

Stages of application
1. Submit your full application. View a sample full application form for Master’s Fellowships in Public Health and Tropical Medicine [PDF 2.2MB]. We may take up to three to four months to consider your full application.
2. Shortlisting. The Public Health and Tropical Medicine Interview Committee will shortlist applications.
3. Review by interview committee. The Public Health and Tropical Medicine Interview Committee will review your application and make the final decision. There are no interviews for these fellowships. If successful, you must take up the fellowship within one year of the award.
